Grandiose scenery and tough competitions on the royal stage of the Transalpine Run from Brand to Klosters over 50 kilometers and 3300 vertical meters.

The queen's stage of the Transalpine Run from Brand in Austria to Klosters in Switzerland demanded everything from the almost 600 remaining runners. Steep climbs, crisp downhill sections, spectacular scenery and even the fastest runners needed more than six hours.

In the WOMEN, MEN and MIXED team competition, there are no changes in the overall standings: Johannes Gerloff and Daniel Greiner from the DYNAFIT X RENNSTEIGLAUFVEREIN team were able to extend their lead to 34 minutes with their second victory of the day (6:31). Things look even clearer in the WOMEN's race: The leading Finns, Team NORDIC WOMEN Maijla Hakala and Elisa Sihlova, also took their third victory of the day (7:57 h). Just as confident: Johanna Ehrenklau and Arne Wolff from TWOPEAKSENDURANCE X THE NORTH FACE with their second victory of the day (7:47 h).

Pure excitement in the master classes, however: Team SALOMON CANADA with Rene Unser and Sarah Macleod (8:23 h) also won the third stage after their victory yesterday and have now taken the overall lead. And in the MASTER MEN category, Team #HATANDCAP (6:40 h) with Stefan Klos and Stephan Niermann fought back from second place yesterday and are now back in the lead.

In the TAR solo classification, Benedikt Nussbaum remains the measure of all things in the MEN category with his third victory of the day in 6:09 h, as does Verena Hohenrainer in the WOMEN category (6:56 h). Silvia Felt was very strong today, taking the lead in the MASTER WOMEN class with her 7:10 stage win.
